

Berliner Netzwerk Arbeitsmarktforschung

The Berlin Network of Labor Market Research (BeNA) was founded in 2004 and offers young labor market researchers working at universities and research institutions in Berlin and Potsdam a forum for the discussion and development of research projects. It is coordinated by young scholars from the participating institutions. The following institutions are actively participating in the Berlin Network of Labor Market Research:

- German Institute for Economic Research (DIW)
- Humboldt Universität zu Berlin
- Freie Universität Berlin
- University of Potsdam
- Rheinisch-Westfälisches Institut für Wirtschaftsforschung (RWI), Berlin Office
- Berlin Social Science Center (WZB)

Central activities of the Berlin Network of Labor Market Research are bi-annual workshops, in which members of the network as well as national and international young researchers present their research projects. Moreover, the network organizes a lecture series of notable national and international academics, guru talks, in which professionals are invited to talk about their PhD careers, and skills camps aimed at enhancing research skills. Formats are open to all interested parties including students.

The seminar is supported by the Leibniz Society since 2008. The Berlin Network of Labor Market Research solely and directly pursues objectives of public benefit. Thus donations to the network are tax-deductible. Further questions regarding the network's work or membership are gladly answered by the following contact persons:
