Workshop on “Health and the Labour Market”

December 9-10, 2019, in Nantes

We are pleased to invite you to submit economics papers for the upcoming workshop on “Health and the Labour Market”. The workshop will take place at the University of Nantes – IAE, in Nantes on December 9-10, 2019.

We are delighted to host Prof. Eric French (University College London) as the keynote speaker.

The aim of the workshop is to bring together senior and junior researchers to discuss their most recent research related to the interplay between health and the labour market. A broad selection of topics fit in this general framework, including—but not limited to—labour market effects of health policies, short/long-term consequences of health shocks, workplace environment, mental/physical health, retirement, and sickness/disability insurance. Empirical and theoretical papers are both welcome. We expect to have about 10-14 presentations.

There is no attendance fee, but participants must cover their travel expenses and accommodation. Registration will also be open to participants without paper presentation (limited space).

Please submit full papers or extended abstracts to wHLE2019nantes@gmail.com, by October 1st, 2019. We will communicate the acceptance decisions shortly hereafter.

Hoping to see you in Nantes in December,
Bénédicte Rouland and Florent Sari (local organizers).
